A brief history of our parish

Fr James Foley, who became parish priest in 1860, bought this plot in 1866 for £5,125. The architect, George Goldie, was well known for his love of the Gothic style. The foundation stone was laid on 14 May 1867. The site was large but awkward, extending 300 feet back from the high street with a very narrow frontage of only 33 feet, compared to the far end of 65 feet.

The church was opened on the Feast of the Visitation--2 July 1869. Bishop Tray celebrated pontifical High Mass, and Archbishop Manning (later Cardinal) preached the sermon. On the night of 13 September 1940, during a large-scale air raid, the church was destroyed, as was the Carmelite church in Kensington Church Street. Worship continued in a local cinema, the Cavendish Furnishing Co store, the Assumption Chapel in Kensington Square, and the Congregational Chapel in Allen Street.

On 31 October 1958, the doors of the current building were opened, with the official opening led by Cardinal Godfrey on 6 April 1959. Fr Charles Cox, one of the curates at the time, composed the music of the favourite Catholic hymn "Sweet Sacrament Divine."

In 1921, GK Chesterton was received into the Catholic Church and made his first communion at OLV. In 1869, Cardinal Manning named OLV as his pro Cathedral. It remained so till the opening of Westminster Cathedral in 1903.

We celebrate the faith of our predecessors, brothers and sisters, the people, religious and clergy who have worshipped, served, and cherished this place as their spiritual home. In 2019 we welcomed our present Archbishop, His Eminence Cardinal Vincent Nichols, who presided and celebrated this Solemn Mass to mark the 150th anniversary of the first Church on this site. Our preacher was the Revd Canon Michael Brockie, Provost of the Cathedral Chapter of Westminster.

We welcomed, too, Fr Patrick Ryall OSM, Dean of the Kensington and Chelsea Deanery. We have so much for which to thank God. We have a lively, multicultural parish with so many faithful people who are the living stones of the Church of Jesus Christ.
